

Hot-Water/ High-Pressure Decontamination Trainings for Lake Service Provider Businesses

The Minnesota Department of Natural Resources is offering three free trainings this summer for lake service provider businesses interested in becoming trained in aquatic invasive species hot-water/high-pressure decontamination methods. Attendees will learn proper methods in decontaminating equipment and receive hands-on practice decontaminating boats using DNR hot-water/high-pressure decontamination units. Due to the hands-on nature and equipment logistics required for this type of class, the trainings have limited space and will require pre-registration.

Businesses that attend and complete the training will have their business name included on the DNR website in a list of businesses trained in DNR hot-water/high-pressure decontamination methods.
