VISITOR TIPS

- Fort Ridgely is one of several area historic sites. Stop at the ranger station to learn more or visit mnhs.org.
- Steep trails can become slippery after it rains.
- Horse riders, only use water crossings when the creek is shallow enough to cross safely.
- Horse riders 16 and older, don't forget to get your horse pass at the ranger station.
- Area cell phone service is spotty.
- In an emergency call 911.

ONLY HAVE AN HOUR?

- Visit the historic fort site, the original stone commissary and building foundations surrounding the parade grounds and monument. Outdoor signs share the fort's history. The site is run by the Minnesota Historical Society.

ABOUT THE PARK

Fort Ridgely State Park was created in 1911 as a memorial to those who fought in the US-Dakota War of 1862. The fort within the park was built in 1853 as a United States Army outpost and training ground, housing 300 soldiers and civilians. In 1862, the Dakota made two attacks on the fort. The war had lasting impacts on the state of Minnesota and the nation. Visit the park today to find more reminders of the area's history. You may discover stone structures built by Civilian Conservation Corps and Veterans Conservation Corps crews in the 1930s.

Explore historic Fort Ridgely.
