ABOUT THE PARK

Myre-Big Island State Park is an oasis of natural diversity. The park was created in 1947 to protect unique geologic features, plant life and human history. What began with 116 acres on Big Island now encompasses over 1,700 acres of rolling hills, ponds and marshes along the shores of Albert Lea Lake. The oak savanna landscape is surrounded by agricultural land. The area has been used by humans for over 9,000 years. Visit today and discover birding, hiking, biking, canoeing, kayaking, snowshoeing, camping and much more.

The park has something for everyone.

TRAIL HIGHLIGHTS

- | | |
|---|------------------|
| Great Marsh Trail
Rolling hills • Mowed grass
Discover migrating waterfowl, abundant wildlife and wildflowers as you walk along rolling hills through prairie, woodland and marsh. Begins at the Great Marsh parking area. | 1.7-mile loop |
| Big Island Trail
Mostly flat • Packed dirt
Follow the outermost edges of Big Island's 120 acres. Enjoy the shade of a mature maple/basswood forest and find intersections with other trails on the island. | 1.5-mile loop |
| Pelican and Esker Trails
Some hills • Packed dirt • Mowed grass
Looking for a longer hike filled with variety? From the park office or White Fox Campground, hike east on the paved Blazing Star State Trail to the Pelican Trail along Albert Lea Lake. Then, follow the uneven Esker Trail over a ridge of sand and gravel left by a glacier long ago. | 5 to 6-mile loop |
