ABOUT THE PARK

Wild River State Park opened to the public in 1978, protecting natural, cultural and recreational resources along the St. Croix River. A large portion of the park (nearly 5,000 acres) was donated by the Northern States Power Company (Xcel Energy). The land was once home to Ojibwe and Dakota people before European settlers logged and farmed it. Today, the park's second-growth forest, oak savanna and prairie landscapes support diverse plant and wildlife species. Enjoy the park's thirty-five miles of trail or paddle along its eighteen miles of river shoreline. In winter, experience the quiet splendor of the valley on ski or snowshoe trails.

Enjoy the beauty of the river along one of the park trails.

TRAIL HIGHLIGHTS

Old Logging Trail (Universal Trail)

Flat • Asphalt path • Bicyclists share this trail seasonally
This beautiful, wooded trail links the trail center, visitor center, picnic area and campground. It also offers full access for all non-motorized uses (except horseback riding). Classic skiers use the trail in winter.

2 miles one-way

Amik's Pond Loop

One large hill and then flat • Gravel • Grass
Enjoy a flower-filled walk down to the river and take in the hillside scenery. Watch for eagles near the river.

1-mile loop

Mitigwaki Loop

Mostly flat • Grass • Gravel
Loop through oak woods on a ridge above Dry Creek. A spur trail connects the visitor center with the trail center. This trail is groomed for classic cross-country skiing in the winter.

1.5-mile loop

Deer Creek Loop

A mix of flat and hilly • Grass • Sand • Horseback riders share this trail seasonally
Cross the scenic Deer Creek bridge, step through a prairie, and walk beneath trees that border the river. Part of this trail was once the historic Point Douglas to Superior Military Road (Old Military Road). This trail is groomed for classic cross-country skiing in the winter.

3.5-mile loop

Highland Hills Trail

Steep terrain • Grass
