ABOUT THE TRAIL

The David Dill/Arrowhead State Trail extends 126 miles. It stretches from 10 miles west of Tower (at the intersection with the Taconite State Trail) to the Blue Ox Multi-use Trail (10 miles south of International Falls). This long-distance, natural surface trail was primarily developed for snowmobiling.

About 69 miles of the trail are suitable for horseback riding, mountain biking and hiking in the summer, though standing water may make some portions impassable. Call the nearest state parks and trails area office for current trail conditions.

This southern portion of the trail features rolling hills with numerous lakes and streams. Many of the hills have large areas of exposed rock and enormous boulders. A dense mix of hardwoods and conifers borders the trail. You’ll find spectacular colors in autumn.

Geologic events shaped the area’s beautiful and rugged landscape. The local bedrock formation is known as the Canadian Shield. It was formed by volcanic action approximately 2.7 billion years ago, making it some of the oldest rock on Earth. Ancient seas later left valuable iron ore that is still mined in the area today.

Further volcanic activity swept away the sea and formed two mountain ranges. Advancing and receding glaciers and millions of years of erosion have worn the mountains down, leaving behind today’s landscape.
